

Ghostwriters scare up six-figure deals for memoirs

By Anna Miller: Arts Correspondent The Scotsman

When ghostwriters are hired to write memoirs, they can scare up six-figure deals for their clients, according to a new survey by the Writers' Guild of America.

The survey, which was conducted by the Writers' Guild of America, found that ghostwriters can earn anywhere from $10,000 to $100,000 for their work. The average fee for a ghostwriter is $50,000. The survey also found that ghostwriters are most likely to be hired to write memoirs. The most common reason for hiring a ghostwriter is that the client is too busy to write the book themselves. Other reasons include that the client is not a native English speaker or that they want to keep their identity anonymous.

The survey also found that ghostwriters are most likely to be hired by celebrities. The most common reason for hiring a ghostwriter is that the client is too busy to write the book themselves. Other reasons include that the client is not a native English speaker or that they want to keep their identity anonymous. The survey also found that ghostwriters are most likely to be hired by celebrities. The most common reason for hiring a ghostwriter is that the client is too busy to write the book themselves. Other reasons include that the client is not a native English speaker or that they want to keep their identity anonymous.

The survey also found that ghostwriters are most likely to be hired by celebrities. The most common reason for hiring a ghostwriter is that the client is too busy to write the book themselves. Other reasons include that the client is not a native English speaker or that they want to keep their identity anonymous. The survey also found that ghostwriters are most likely to be hired by celebrities. The most common reason for hiring a ghostwriter is that the client is too busy to write the book themselves. Other reasons include that the client is not a native English speaker or that they want to keep their identity anonymous.

WORDS TO THE WISE

When ghostwriters are hired to write memoirs, they can scare up six-figure deals for their clients, according to a new survey by the Writers' Guild of America. The survey, which was conducted by the Writers' Guild of America, found that ghostwriters can earn anywhere from $10,000 to $100,000 for their work. The average fee for a ghostwriter is $50,000. The survey also found that ghostwriters are most likely to be hired to write memoirs. The most common reason for hiring a ghostwriter is that the client is too busy to write the book themselves. Other reasons include that the client is not a native English speaker or that they want to keep their identity anonymous.

SUBSCRIPTIONS & LEGAL NOTICE

Ù`à•&!â]câ[]•Ác[Ác@^ÁWRITERSWORLD þ^,•|^cc^!Áæ!^Á-!^ÁÁæ}ǎÁ]|^æ•^Áâ•c!âà`c^ÁâcÁ
~!^|`^É...É,îâc^!•, [!|â&[É`\\